

IPSO annual statement for 2021

Introduction

The Irish News is a daily newspaper which has been published in Belfast since 1891. Its main circulation area is in Northern Ireland but it is also available in all parts of the Republic of Ireland. Its sister paper is FarmWeek, a weekly with a separate editorial structure aimed at the agricultural sector, which is produced in the same building and also circulates across Northern Ireland. As editor of The Irish News, I supervise all correspondence with IPSO.

Editorial standards.

We seek to maintain the highest possible editorial standards in all aspects of our coverage, and we believe that we have always demonstrated a strong track record in this regard. No complaint against The Irish News has ever been upheld by IPSO or indeed during the entire history of its predecessor, the Press Complaints Commission. All our staff journalists are qualified and experienced in their own particular fields. They are committed to verifying all stories to the highest possible professional standards. We are always ready to seek guidance from IPSO in connection any matters arising.

Our complaints-handling process.

If a complaint is made to The Irish News either in person or by telephone, it will normally be handled by our managing editor, Fiona McGarry, working with our newsdesk staff. If the complaint is straightforward, and can be resolved informally, we will be happy to regard the matter as closed. If a written complaint is made, we retain the correspondence. It is always our intention to resolve complaints as swiftly and amicably as possible. We carry the following message in a box on p2 every day.

* Complaints and Corrections

The Irish News is a member of the Independent Press Standards Organisation (IPSO) and is committed to upholding its Editors' Code of Practice.

If you have a complaint about editorial content or wish to draw an inaccuracy to our attention, you should contact complaints@irishnews.com with your name, address, daytime telephone number and details of your complaint.

You can also write to: The Editor, The Irish News, 113-117 Donegall Street, Belfast or telephone 028 9032 2226.

If you wish to make a complaint under the terms of the Editors' Code administered by IPSO, you can find full details at www.ipso.co.uk or you can email inquiries@ipso.uk or telephone 0300 123 2220. You can also write to: IPSO, Gate House, 1 Farringdon Street, London EC4M

7LG.

Our training process

Copies of the Editors' Code of Practice are given to every member of our editorial staff on an annual basis. Due to the low number of complaints we have received, we have not so far felt it necessary to organise a specific training programme linked to the Code of Practice. However, we remain very much open to suggestions from IPSO in this regard.

Our record on compliance

During the period from January 1 to December 31, 2021, no complaints against The Irish News were ruled on by IPSO's Complaints Committee.

Appendix

All our journalists are familiar with the latest Editors' Code of Practice and have been briefed on all recent updates. We do not use any other internal manuals, codes or guidance.
