Editorial

The newspaper believes that the future of newspapers continues to be in the printed format remaining traditionally hyper-local, politically unbiased, informative, and free from online clickbait news.

The Glamorgan Star currently boasts a readership of 33,000 with an independently audited circulation of 12,300 (January 2023).

The printed newspaper is distributed via accredited Self Select Distribution to outlets throughout the Vale of Glamorgan and beyond, including all the major superstores within its patch – Asda, Co-op, Morrisons, Tesco and Waitrose.

The newspaper's website and social media can be accessed in one convenient location where readers can also view the entire digital version of the publication for free.

Current editorial team members are qualified and highly experienced who keep themselves updated with regards personal development. As part of Continuing Professional Development (CPD) all staff are encouraged to keep knowledge up to date with materials provided, literature, website links and training videos, including those provided through IPSO.

The news team is aware that IPSO offers pre-publication guidance. The Glamorgan Star Ltd. has not had the need to seek guidance since being established in July 2021. All staff are encouraged to bookmark the IPSO's homepage.
