Where required, editors and journalists seek advice from IPSO in advance of publishing articles to consider matters of compliance with the Editor's Code. This advice is then considered alongside editorial guidance and the public interest when refining and publishing any articles.

Verification of stories

Journalists and editors take all appropriate steps to confirm stories. Journalists provide lists of sources and contacts for all verifiable facts and quotes within features, which are then double-checked and confirmed with the primary sources. All commissioned content is also checked with an external legal expert prior to publication.

Compliance with the Editor's Code

Copies of the Editor's Code are available to all journalists. Where the Regulator finds against a publication in the course of assessing a complaint, the publication complies with the findings and any remedial action required. The IPSO mark is displayed on the masthead page of the print magazine and in the footer of the website.

Editorial complaints, determined under Regulation 27

Reader's Digest has a standard complaints procedure. Members of the public can register an editorial complaint under this procedure by contacting Customer Services or by submitting a complaint in writing to the company address.

Complaints received or referred from IPSO are assessed by the Responsible Persons, who will seek to resolve the matter with the complainant. Complaints that fall outside the procedure, i.e. are not editorial complaints, are referred to the relevant department/person.

When the Regulator finds against a publication when determining a complaint under Regulation 27, the publication complies with the findings and any remedial action required by the Regulator.

3.2 Our record on compliance

There have been no adverse adjudications against Reader's Digest.

3.3 Training of staff

When required, Reader's Digest arranges staff training sessions to update staff on regulatory changes. New joiners are supplied with a staff handbook and copy of the Editor's Code.
