COMPLIANCE WITH THE EDITOR'S CODE

- KYLE CHRONICLE publishes clearly (on page 4) information indicating to whom complaints about editorial issues should be directed, alongside the Ipso mark. This information also appears on the website on <https://kylechronicle.co.uk/contact/>
- Children: all photos of children are supplied by the local primary schools or other organisations who have gathered written permission from parents/carers for the children to appear in local press.
- We refer to the Ipso's Editor code and the University of Oxford Style Guide

TRAINING & QUALIFICATIONS

In 2024 the editor attended the workshop "100 Days of the Green Transition". The editor has a DNSEP (equivalent to a Master's Degree) in Communication from the École Nationale Supérieure d'Art et de Design de Nancy. The proofreader has a Master's Degree in Information and Library Studies from the Robert Gordon University.

CORRECTIONS & COMPLAINTS

There have been no corrections.

The editor was contacted by a contributor who had received a complaint from a reader about the content of their article. The reader then approached Ipso, who after assessing their complaint found that it does not raise a possible breach of the Editors' Code. No further action was taken.
