

IPSO annual statement for National World Publishing Ltd: 1 January 2024 to 31 December 2024

1 Factual information about the Regulated Entity

1.1 A list of its titles/products.

Attached on separate spreadsheet

1.2 The name of the Regulated Entity's responsible person.

Gary Shipton, Editor-in-Chief of Your World and National World is the responsible person for the company.

1.3 A brief overview of the nature of the Regulated Entity.

The regulated entity National World is a national and regional multimedia organisation in the UK. Its national brands are The Scotsman (Scotland), The News Letter (Northern Ireland) and nationalworld.com. We provide news and information services to the communities we serve through our portfolio of publications and websites.

In 2024, National World acquired:

Athletics Weekly

Serious About Rugby League

The Business Magazine Group

They are being consolidated within the National World operation and will be subject to IPSO regulation and promote the IPSO contact information in the normal way in 2025.

We continue to set the highest editorial standards by ensuring that our staff are provided with excellent internally developed training resources. The Editors' Code of Practice is embedded in every part of our editorial operations and we commit absolutely to the principles expounded by IPSO.

We welcome and embrace the specific initiatives taken forward by IPSO in 2024:

Representatives of National World attended the excellent IPSO10 Conference which brought together publishers, editors, and industry stakeholders to reflect on a decade of achievements and discuss the future of independent press regulation.

National World platforms have incorporated the refreshed IPSO look with the updated IPSO Mark now featured in all our publications.

We have flagged to editorial staff the updated guidance on reporting major incidents which provides editors and journalists with a clear framework for reporting with accuracy and sensitivity in such an event; and we have modified our training modules to reflect the Amendment to Clause 6 of the Code which took effect in January 2025. The responsible person at National World, Gary Shipton, is a member of the Editors' Code Committee.

National World continues to operate an internal Editorial Governance Committee with the key remit to consider, draft, implement and review the policies, procedures and training for the whole Group to ensure compliance with its obligations under IPSO.

3. Brief details of the compliance process

Our training process

The Editors' Code is the standard used throughout the Group. Our staff undergo training to ensure they fully understand the Editors' Code and know how to apply the Code in real-life settings when seeking and drafting editorial content and dealing with any issues that may subsequently arise.

Updates to the Editors' Code and supporting Codebook along with any guidance issued is communicated to all members of staff. This communication takes place through National World's Editorial Learning and Development Department and is reinforced by the Editorial Directors and Editors in their regular briefings to their teams.

The Editorial Learning and Development Department provides an online training programme which tests staff on a range of scenarios which touch on various aspects of the Code and this module has been updated to reflect the more recent changes in the Editors' Code.

The Editors' Code is made available to new trainees joining National World and trainees are also put through the National Qualification in Journalism run by the National Council for the Training of Journalists. This includes training in ethical issues which is tested in the Media Law and Practice exam.

It is a condition of employment of all editorial staff, contained within their contracts, that they fully observe the standards required by IPSO as explained within the Code. It is also a condition of commissioned freelance contributors that they fully comply with the Code. This is also made clear through the induction process for all new editorial employees.

Law and ethics refreshers are an integral part of the National World training programme and the Editorial Learning and Development website includes material on ethical issues as well as the IPSO Code and National World complaints procedures.

Pre-publication guidance is provided in the first instance internally by the Editor-in-Chief and the Legal Director. All Editors have been informed of the IPSO contacts for which pre-publication advice should be sought. National World has a robust editorial management structure which ensures that whenever a story might require verification it is fully assessed but responsibility for the tone and content of every title remains with the Editor.

Our record on compliance

Whenever there is an adverse adjudication against a National World publication, it is referred to National World's Editorial Governance Committee. The Committee examines the censure in the context of other adjudications and then initiates a full investigation. The investigation identifies the failings and the steps needed to ensure no repetition locally or across the Group.

These recommendations can include training requirements and potential changes to National World's editorial policies and procedures.

4. Details of the steps taken by the Regulated Entity in response to any adverse Adjudications by the Regulator during the previous year.

The following was the one complaint against National World Publishing which was upheld by the Complaints Committee in 2024:

04272-24 v The Star (Sheffield) (National World Publishing Ltd)

1 A summary of the complaint: A reader's letter was published in the print edition of the Sheffield Star on June 12, 2024 which stated that students in Sheffield campaigning for Palestinians were "brainwashed". A number of readers complained to The Star and to IPSO that the detail contained in the letter was offensive and Islamophobic.

2 The action we took to resolve it: Publication of the letter was a grave error by the print team concerned and we immediately accepted our mistake. In the next issue of the newspaper, June 13, we published an apology, as well as a page of readers' letters responding to the letter under complaint. The apology appeared on the same page in a similar position to the original letter, was highlighted with a red border and was signed by the print editor.

It was headlined "Apology" and stated: "We would like to sincerely apologise for a letter about student campaigns which appeared in The Star yesterday. We fully accept that the publication of the letter was a serious misjudgement and we are deeply sorry."

The senior editor also wrote to apologise personally to every person who complained to us, in a timely fashion and where possible on the same day as their complaint was received. As well as expressing our unconditional apology we endeavoured to make it clear The Star was not aligned with the views expressed in the letter. In some cases this correspondence led to a positive dialogue with the readers concerned.

3 The action we took to avoid a repetition: The editor and print team staff who were responsible for the inclusion of this letter were spoken to at length about this matter. Our process of checking and rechecking readers' letters for publication across all our regional daily titles was revisited, examined and reinforced. It was made clear to all teams in the Daily Press Division there must never be a repeat of the inclusion of such material. IPSO's Complaints Committee ruled on July 16 that whilst the complaint was upheld the remedial action already taken by The Star (the apology, and the publication of the readers' letters) to be sufficient and did not require any further action.
